Ceia assesses the feasibility of real estate development projects and manages individual projects through:

- feasibility studies and economic and financial evaluations;
- involvement of investors;
- coordination of economic and financial activities
- controlling the progress of the project in order to ensure maximum profitability.

Currently, there is an ongoing project to develop a real estate complex acquired by CEIA Real Estate, located in the Tuscan countryside, consisting of the upgrading, for subsequent fractioning and sale, of two former farms over 20 hectares with overhanging quality crops, farmhouses and farm buildings. There are similar interventions in a preliminary evaluation phase being carried out in the Veneto region, Versilia and Rome.

In order to maximize the potential of individual interventions, partnerships with major companies operating in the field of general construction and real estate development are in an advanced stage of definition; these partnerships should also be considered as complementary and synergistic to the activities carried out by Ceia in the ecological and plant sector.
